Bill Seeks Seize Any 'Portal' Money

WASHINGTON (AP)—Senator W. Lee O'Daniel (Dem.-Tex.) today introduced legislation in the United States senate to recover for the treasury all money workers may receive from portal-to-portal pay suits.

His bill also would allow employers to charge off on their income tax the full amount of any portal claims they are required to pay by court order under the Fair Labor Standards act.

O'Daniel took this action after the American Federation of Labor and a C.I.O. union joined in opposing anti-portal-pay legislation previously introduced. The A.F.L. said it would deprive "millions of workers" of their rights.

Three Provinces Reach Accord With Ottawa on Tax Matters

ed before other provinces like Alberta and B.C. have had their say. It would be most impolitic, for example, to prevent Premier Manning with a document ready for signature on the dotted line.

The general belief in Ottawa is that three provinces are "in the bag," with P.E.I. to follow; that there is good hope of seven provinces joining the agreement before the federal budget comes down in spring. And, as an ever pervasive high, comes the hope that all nine of Canada's provinces will be in individual agreements before the end of this year, with an overall agreement to follow.

"Satisfactory Progress"

There are the hopes that inspire the empty verbiage of the statements made by Finance Minister Abbott who said that "most satisfactory progress had been made" in what he called "the discussions." These hopes, too, inspired Premier Gurney, who said that "representatives of the dominion are all of which may sound like comic opera; but it should not conceal from the discerning public certain hard, pecuniary facts. The dominion has not up to the present been in a position of financial assistance. The position of other provinces will roughly be equalized with B.C. That means that in five or even seven provinces, there is good hope of cutting out duplicate taxation, such as double income tax. There is no hope that the full dominion scheme of social security will be put into effect until an overall agreement is reached.

WINNIPEG, CP—The whole approach to dominion-provincial relations should be based on the premise that Canada is one country and there should be further unifying and solidifying of the country. Mr. D. Pilon, M.P. for Kamloops, B.C., today took a meeting of the Winnipeg Young Progressive Conservatives.

Separate agreements between the federal government and provincial governments do not constitute an honest effort to solve the problem of dominion-provincial relations, he said. "The federal government's present action is creating division."

TRY AGAIN

An old waiter at the club was giving the new hand a few tips. "See that fellow who's just come in?" he whispered. "He's got a twin brother and they're alike as two peas. Only this one's hard of hearing. Watch him!"

Going to the manager's side, he smiled politely and said in an ordinary voice:

"Well, please, and what do you want in the morning?"

"I'll have a chop," was the reply. "And by the way, it's my brother who doesn't hear at all."

REAL FUNNY

Jinks! "I hear that some of the prominent actresses, singers, and society ladies get as much as $100 merely for signing their names to magazine articles that are written for them by somebody else." Jinks! "Yes, that's true." Jinks! "Dear me! I wonder what they would get if they wrote the articles themselves?" Jinks! "They'd get laughed at, probably!"

STAGE ALIVE

Steady happened upon a fellow Scot lying in the road after a similar crash. "What are you up to?" he asked. "No," "Well, I'm insured, too. What you mind if I lay down beside you?"

Where Is Valley Of Headless Men?

definitely subtle and some obviously due to mishap.

They agree the place is avoided by Indians. But the northwesterners say such an attitude on the part of the natives is understandable.

First of all, Deadman's Valley is difficult to reach. There is no more for it than in many of the most accessible areas. Sulphur springs give the air of the valley a vile smell, making it unattractive and Indians are just as superstitious as the rest of the north. The Indians have heard the strange stories told by white men concerning the valley. So why do they go there?

Gold in Region

That there is gold in the Nahanni country no one has doubted since the Klondike rush days. When the region formed a backdrop to the Yukon. According to popular northern legends, the richest deposits are located in the Nahanni valley. But the valley has been combed fruitfully time after time. So have other nearby valleys and surrounding hills. But no major gold strike has been revealed. There's gold there, say northwesterners, but to find it is something else.

Big mining companies and the federal government have sent experts into the valley to verify the gold stories. Traces have been found, but nothing spectacular. "A spoonful of gold here and there doesn't justify development, nor should it encourage a 'prospector rush,'" one mine official said recently.

As for the "headless" feature of the valley: Well, the climate is regarded as "rough" even by the most experienced bushmen. But white men have visited the valley ever since there have been whites in the north. Hunting parties have gone in by plane on many occasions.

Parts of the Nahanni river valley, where it roars through mountainous canyons are reported as rugged and precarious as anything on the continent. Travelling there involves hard work, discomfort, swarms of headless mosquitoes and blackflies. "Headless Valley is no place for anyone interested in scenery," one northwesterner said. Only men of the "hardest character and physical toughness" should attempt to invade the area, and only men experienced in northern travel.

The "tropical" climate reported in the area is said to be "just another myth" the result of hot springs. These bubble up over a wide expanse of that part of the north, but Deadman's Valley itself is no tropical paradise. Most of these hot water springs are further west.

The "tropical" climate of several parties to invade the area, are a little difficult for most northwesterners to understand. They believe people have the "test" their heads" over the Nahanni myth, but deny that descriptive mainly "people who have paid too much attention to "glamorized" versions of northern stories.

More Irish in U. S. Than in All Ireland

DUBLIN, (CP)—There are no more people of Irish blood in the United States than in Ireland, D. W. Hogan, professor of political science at Cambridge, told the Royal Dublin Society.

Between 1820 and 1920, nearly 5,000,000 Irish people settled in the United States, becoming the "basic proletariat" of the country. The only parallel in history was the migration from Portugal to Brazil.

Even so, said Professor Hogan, the proportion of Irish stock was high in Newfoundland, Australia and Iceland.

Red Cross Will Seek Funds For Vital Peacetime Work

An appeal for the funds necessary to carry on the work of the Canadian Red Cross Society is to be made in March. It has been found necessary to collect funds widely prevalent idea that the organization exists for war purposes only when, as a matter of fact, its function in time of peace is of at least equal importance. It stands ready always to meet emergency that result in human suffering and it is doing this with ever increasing effectiveness.

In both town and country it has had personnel in the branch wherever disaster suddenly strikes individuals or communities, as has happened not infrequently, while communities. The record of these activities is a deeply impressive one.

Essential Task

Those who have benefited from their work have testified how great is their debt to the society and it is obvious how true would be the consequence if such an organization were not available and were not in a position to render help that is so much required from time to time.

In every part of Alberta and of the whole Dominion the Red Cross has over and over again during the past year, as in many previous ones, brought immediate relief in case of sudden misfortune. It has been called upon constantly to come to the rescue where fire has destroyed homes. In the rural districts the situation that thus arises is almost invariably acute in the extreme.

Emergency supplies are kept on hand and forwarded without delay.

Example of Service

An example was afforded in Edmonton when the Western Alberta branch on the south side were burned. Thirty-one individuals who had their homes there were given accommodation was secured, clothing furnished without delay and assistance in getting re-established was given.

There are many other phases of the peacetime work of the Red Cross in the province and elsewhere which with which one cannot be acquainted without realizing how imperative is its maintenance at full efficiency.

The pattern of the Alberta division of the society is Hon. J. C. Bowen, lieutenant-governor. The northern section of the committee that is to undertake the campaign in March has R. H. Settle as its chairman, while James Walker is the honorary secretary.

R. T. Griffin is campaign manager for Edmonton and John A. King for rural areas. R. J. Bradley is the chairman of the industrial, commercial and E. F. McCreary of the business sector division.

Australia to See Canadian Exhibit

STRAFFORD, Australia, (CP)—Canada will be represented by a $30,000 display at a British Empire exhibition to be staged this year in connection with Sydney's Royal Agricultural show.

An official of the Canadian Division of the society is expected to come to Australia to supervise the layout of the Canadian section which will feature a map of Canada showing the location of various centres at which Australian trained under the Empire air corps.

British New Zealand and India will also be represented and if the Empire section is successful it may become a regular department of the show held annually in Sydney.

Use Pocket Sirens To Baffle Bandits

NEW YORK, (CP)—A Canadian man has devised a portable siren which will act as an alarm when the owner is attacked on the street by a bandit. The device is small enough to be carried in the pocket, says a news agency.

A bellows to produce sharp, ringing tones, and the noise that results is something like the scream of a post-war siren.

While these methods of increasing a nation's food supply are considered of great potential value, the American investigators warn in their report against using such fats and proteins without adequate medical investigation.

Produced Proteins
The materials produced were pure, and necessary in any diet to build up and replace body tissue. They are very complex and cannot be produced synthetically in a laboratory.

Proteins are produced only by living things. Plants manufacture them. Animals eat the plants and produce others. It long has been recognized that proteins can be formed by a yeast or mould growing in a liquid which contains sugar and nitrogen to form some such form of amino acids.

Protein
Toward the end of the war, German scientists were experimenting with a synthetic fat produced by a certain mould organism. They told the American investigators they had been able to change 20 percent of a mould culture into whole fat, which also is essential in the human diet.

THIS IS HOW THE SOVIET PEOPLE LIVE

This Is How The Soviet People Are Entertained

Soviet people have much the same taste in amusements as we have; but their recreation, like ours, was cut during the war.

Football has a big following, but the Russians think it strange of us to play during the winter. They cannot understand why the ground is not too hard and why we do not slip up on the ice. In Russia summer is the football season, and matches take place in the late afternoon, when the heat is less.

There are no football pools and not much betting on matches. In normal times there are horse races with a state-operated tote. Of course there are no bookies.

AT THE END of the war horse racing was already beginning again in Moscow, and there is a state lotto. But the main outlet of the gambling instinct has been, oddly enough, the war loan.

One is encouraged to subscribe generously to the State loan in some cases, interest is paid, and in other cases lucky numbers with prizes—such as a fur coat, a bicycle or something equally desirable.

Nearly everyone who can buy hopes for the chance of a prize. After all, the interest would be only a small sum, and Russians are not interested in small sums.

Most parks in the Soviet Union are called "Parks of Culture and Rest" when a park is shut I have seen notices which say: "Park not working."

THESE PARKS have trees and flower beds and benches in rather parks; but in addition, skating rinks and places to hire skis. In the big Moscow parks there are also parachute towers and many of the amusements of a fun.

The loudspeakers here unaccountably, and many of the trees bear large portraits of leaders of the Soviet Government. I prefer the parks attached to the name of the old rulers of the Russian Empire.

At the end of the war, the parks in Moscow, which had been converted with superb showmanship into a museum of serfdom. It sends a shudder down one's back to realize how many thousands of the Sherevets family had and what their servants over them. They had their own houses with art dancers, singing, the palace was built by art architects, and even the family portraits were painted by art artists. The standard of taste was as high as in any other country, and people who relied on serfs for the best living in life.

CHIESS IS PERHAPS the national Russian game. It is played with great seriousness by both sexes, and the classes, and important matches are fully reported in the Press and closely followed by the public.

A championship match will fill a large concert hall in Moscow with an eager and well-informed audience, ranging from small boys to distinguished "Grossmensters" of the game.

Every Park of Culture, and Rest has its "Chess Hall," a large room furnished with tables, chairs and chess boards. These are usually full of a clientele of all types, playing in a most un-Russian silence with move from board to board, breathing down the players' necks and crowding round an interesting match.

AT LEAST 200 members of the Moscow ballet are married to leading Russian chess players, and one of them arranged for a simultaneous exhibition against members of the chess and ballet community. The conceded two draws, one to a ballerina.

People play at cards, but the games seem simpler than ours, and I have never seen a card game—bridge—for that matter which. Once, on a railway journey, I was asked by some Red Army officers to make up a four at Preference. I had previously imagined that this game was played only by respectable old ladies in Russian country houses a hundred years ago.

Cricket is unknown to them, and it is not distinguished from croquet. IN THE SUMMER there is a good deal of swimming, and this is one of the few sports which Russians of all ages enjoy for the fun of it. Your Russian always seems to have the idea of going on undertaking sports he must equip himself to be a better citizen.

Very often this sentiment amounts to nothing more than to speak, saying grace before meals. But the Russians have not got the idea that sports are something or all ages and for everyone except the halt, the blind and the blind, but because it is fun to be out of doors and exercise physical skill.

As our Embassy flanked the river some of its thought it would be a good idea to be able to swim. I had to beat out in the evenings. We found we should have to join a water club in order to have access to boats at all. When the difficulties of joining were overcome, we found we had to take the sport very seriously indeed. We were obliged to join crews and to train in earnest—usually at a very early hour. Fortunately, I became ill after the first practice.

PERHAPS THE Russians are too far from the age when excessive physical work is the lot of nearly everyone. They get a great deal of enjoyment out of life, but they have no work for fun. One Russian intellectual was puzzled and delighted at Mr. Churchill's remark in "My Early Years" that "nothing was great but the work."

An intimate look at the lighter side of life in the Soviet today—the world of entertainment—is given here by John Lawrence in his final Edmonton Bulletin article on "This Is How Russia Really Lives". In his previous stories, Lawrence has dealt with various aspects of life in Russia ranging from medicine to clothing and housing. Here he tells how the Russian people are amused. The theatre, radio, opera and ballet are all reviewed, together with sport. The Soviet people, says Lawrence, have much the same taste in amusement as people of the western world, although chess appears to be their national game and is played with great seriousness. The drama gets high priority in Russia, and Lawrence says the theatre is on a higher plane than that which exists in any other land. As for the movies, as here, they are very popular in Russia, but the big problem is getting enough of them to go around. Lawrence lived for several years in Russia and his writings are based on his own observations. He was uninfluenced by any special propaganda and simply tells what he saw.

THE CINEMA AND RADIO

but the general standard of life is set low. Volley ball is widely played.

"Winnie the Pooh" and "Uncle Remus" have been given. The children's programs are more inventive than the rest. One broadcast of the story "A Night in May" was like one of the very best.

During the war there was no time for the children's programs. It was possible to find out what was going to be broadcast. The radio officials described their method as "putting on the most important news first."

There have been few American plays by Lillian Hellman, "The Little Foxes" and "Watch on the Rhine" were very successful.

There are also fairly theatre more or less on the lines of our revues but these do not, on the whole, attract as much interest as the revues in our country. The reason is that the State has given priority to the highbrow theatres.

THE AVERAGE reader, after reading the Soviet communiqué and glancing at the headlines, turned first to the foreign news on the back page—where he read, through, looking for meaning between the lines and noting the position of each item on the page.

Then he would turn to the front page for more war news or home front news. Next he would look at the two middle pages, which gave much background to the news on the front page.

THE SOVIET papers give no crime stories and very little "human interest" material. The style of writing is generally verbose and often full of cliché.

Periodicals of various kinds were rarely sought. They are all rather highbrow, the most popular being Ogonyok, which is about as serious as "Time and Tide."

Adventure stories are popular, and detective stories are read with eagerness by all who know enough English and can get hold of copies. A book called "The Mystery of Dr. Burago" was very popular during the war, and there are indications of an attempt to develop a Soviet school of detective fiction.

This will certainly be respected to find a social purpose. AT SCHOOL the children learn to read, to write, to do arithmetic, and to sing. There is a spontaneous taste for the more popular Russian classics, such as Pushkin, Tolstoy, Chekhov, Kropotkin, and the plays of Lermontov. It is almost universal.

Shakespeare is read in modern Russian and is not made a subject of examination. Not many of his plays are known by most Russians, but he strikes home.

Dickens and Kipling, Mark Twain and Jack London are favorite reading of young and old and Byron has the usual success of destiny. Priorities is the best known among contemporaries.

disappointing. Russian producers do not yet seem to understand the audience's taste.

Moscow producers were innocent in their demand for new plays. It is no doubt that more would have been put on if it had been able to produce more good war plays of a suitable kind.

ation for the productions I saw of the "Sleeping Beauty" would be repeated by a British ballet audience.

BUT IN THEIR OWN line the Russians are unequalled. Recent performances of Giesels, particularly when Ulmanov is dancing, are perhaps the most wonderful ballet performances I have ever seen.

TASTE

In painting "realism" is the established policy and this means realism in the Victorian sense. Not merely is Picasso condemned, but, for instance, some of our most effective and popular posters—such as those of the L.P.T.B.—are considered by the Union of Soviet Artists to deviate from the correct line. One is asked: "But how can the people understand that?"

THE OFFICIAL TASTE is that of the intelligent working man. Taste in painting comes to most people later than taste in literature or music, because it is easy to get hold of a book and not very difficult to go to concerts, but to acquire a liking for good painting one must go specially and many times to the very few places on earth where good pictures are shown.

My view is that Soviet official taste in literature is sound, but unsophisticated. It contains nothing unworthy, but it misses something. The official taste in music is already more limited, and in painting and sculpture the artist is asked to work to the worst specification.

Russians are great readers, but they are historically much nearer to illiteracy than our own people. Books are harder to get, and a new book is more of an event. Russians read slowly and methodically all through, and remember more of what they read than the last two generations in the West have.

ALL PRINTING is in the hands of the State. The newspapers, which print only the news, are the only ones of the good. Practically all the classics of all countries are obtainable, and the Russian people are modern writers are scrutinized carefully for policy before they can be translated.

Soviet taste in modern literature is conditioned by what is available in Russia.

By no means all Soviet citizens are ready readers, and it is not unusual to see someone reading the newspaper aloud to a group of listeners. Newspapers were hard to get during the war and were carefully read.

The average reader, after reading the Soviet communiqué and glancing at the headlines, turned first to the foreign news on the back page—where he read, through, looking for meaning between the lines and noting the position of each item on the page.

Intend to Proceed With Bridge Work

The utility committee Friday decided to recommend to city council that no changes be made in plans for bridges that have been already approved. It recommended that authority be granted to A. W. Haddow, city engineer, to proceed with the ordering of grids for the reworking of the lower traffic lane of the high level bridge.

PLANS FOR TRAFFIC lanes on the upper level of the bridge were not discussed, when Haddow asked that this question be left in abeyance for the time being.

The committee reaffirmed its decision to proceed with the construction of a second traffic lane on the low level bridge. The cost of this work was estimated at $100,000.

MR HADDOW intimated that work on the high level bridge would be completed by mid-1938, and would cost approximately $200,000. It is proposed to start the bridge, and to lower the end of the south span by about six feet.

This lowering will provide a satisfactory approach grade from the south.

Afternoon asked Mr. Haddow if the proposed bridge plans had been submitted to water authorities, and were assured that leading engineers considered one of the questions that the plans proposed were the best possible for the Edmonton bridge setup.

He reported also that a plan of traffic control on the low level bridge was being discussed with railway authorities, and that it would be installed shortly. The cost for the installation of lights on the bridge, which would mean traffic when large vehicles were crossing.

THE COMMITTEE decided also to recommend against the extension of bus service on the Fort Road, to the city limits, and also against the petition from 200 persons seeking a new service in the northern Alberta railway zone.

THOMAS FERRELL, chief railway superintendent, told committee members that the system was losing $1,000 monthly on the operation of the Fort Road bus line on the present route, and to extend it to the city limits would double the cost. He added that about the same amount was being lost monthly on the operation of the Kingsway bus service. The proposed route to the N.W. shops would result in about the same amount.

Man Slugged, $450 Taken Pair to Stand Trial For Robbery, Violence

Olaf Pederson and Adeline Graham, both of Edmonton, will stand trial in superior court on a charge of robbery with violence. Pederson was committed by Magistrate A. J. Miller, K.C. after a preliminary hearing in police court Friday. The Graham woman was remanded for trial with bail set at $5,000. The charge arose out of the alleged slugging of Henry Dowdell, of Vancouver, on Jan. 7. Dowdell said he was robbed of $150.

DOWDELL SAID he came to the city on Jan. 6 and cashed a cheque for $250. He later collected another $250 from a business from the same man. He was then taken to a rooming house and told to wait for a man named Graham.

When he came back, he found the man named Graham and a man named Pederson. They told him to get out of the room and to wait for a man named Graham.

Plan Ottawa Talks On Tax Agreement

A provincial tax transfer agreement is believed to be of most immediate importance of five subjects to be discussed in Ottawa next week by Premier Ernest Manning and Hon. N. E. Tanner, provincial minister of lands and mines, and federal government officials.

PREMIER MANNING and Mr. Tanner, accompanied by J. F. Perreval, deputy provincial treasurer, will leave Edmonton Sunday night for Regina where they plan to remain about a week, returning here in 10 days.

Friday Mr. Manning said there are "about five matters" to be discussed with local authorities.

Negotiations of a new provincial Dominion tax agreement is one of the matters which will be discussed, the premier said.

Manning said he did not have a comment on the subject; further news leaving for the east.

THURSDAY afternoon Premier Manning and Mr. Tanner discussed the situation with Hon. James G. Gardiner, federal minister of agriculture.

"I feel satisfied that the agreement reached with the federal government on these points. We had a most satisfactory conference," the premier said. "The matter will be further discussed at Ottawa," he said.

TODAY'S MESSAGE

Joy In Work

"Therefore, I say that there is nothing better in this world than that man should be joyful in his work." These are the words of King Solomon, recorded in the Old Testament. They reflect the attitude of the Christian since the time when humble fiddlers, or diggers, were called to quarry the calcareous in which early Christian communities were made to seek shelter.

Modern conditions may make it difficult to bring a spirit of joyousness to the daily toil. Long-distance commuting, inadequate wages, industry-labor frictions, lack of congeniality among workers, and a sense of frustration are some of the factors that take the joy out of work.

"No glorification of work can discount the fact that it entails constraint, fatigue and monotony," a religious writer once said. Yet he maintained that work is indispensable to the best development of the individual, even though the most useful and necessary work may be against the grain.

The reason is that in labor are found a certain dignity and joy that exists regardless of external factors. Work is a natural thing; and when really creative a source of deep satisfaction. It takes us out of ourselves, develops a sense of comradeship and communion. And, provided it does not deprive us of legitimate recreation and relaxation, becoming the sole pre-occupation of life, it can be a means towards high spiritual development.

To find the joy in work one must have a sense of dedication to God's will. One must remember that Christ, too, was a worker. He, too, knew comradeship and comradeship. When soul and body become partners in work, what is dull and dreary to the body can be transformed in the soul into the joy of patient and willing dedication to man and God.

MOUSE PROSPERITY

ONE morning several of the Teenie Weenies were returning from their marketing back of the grocery store. They had found two dried prunes and a perfectly good string bean, so they were happy as they trudged through the deep snow. Just as they entered a bit of thick brush they met Ginky, whom they hadn't seen for many weeks. The mouse would have passed them by, but the General bowed and wished him good morning.

Ginky stopped and leaned against a bush and gave the Teenie Weenies a cold nod. "Collecting garbage, I see," he remarked.

"We are getting what has been thrown out of the grocery," answered the General. "We get it honestly, no matter whether you call it garbage or not."

"Well, I'm sorry for folks who have to eat garbage," sneered Ginky, quite forgetting that he had often eaten out of the Teenie Weenies' garbage thimble. "I prefer better food."

"You seem to be living well these days," said the General, glancing at the mouse's sleek hair, rounded tummy, and well-groomed whiskers. "You must have struck it rich."

"Yes, I'm rich," answered Ginky. "I'm living in the grocery basement. Everything I want right at hand and no cat on the place. Wealth is rather troublesome, though, for one has to be constantly on guard to protect one's property. I must be always on the watch for thieving mice. I'm living right beneath a huge cheese. York State cheese, and my favorite brand."

The TEENIE WEEENIES

"I thought you didn't believe in property rights," smiled the General. "Have you changed your mind?"

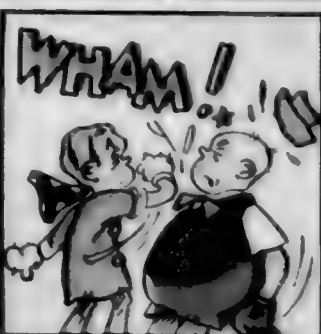

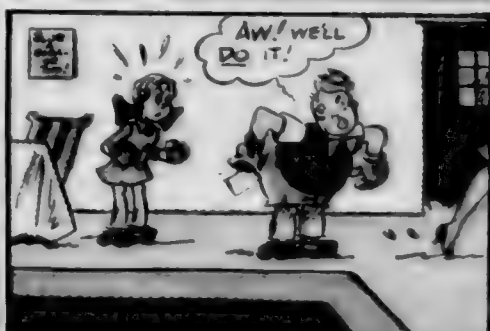

"I don't believe in other folks' property rights—if that's what you mean," answered Ginky.

"Well, Ginky," warned the General, "I'm afraid your prosperity won't last long. Your sin will be found out in time."

"That's what you think," Ginky retorted. "I'm too smart to gnaw into a cheese where it can be seen by the grocer. I work from beneath. That's why I fight off other mice and keep this cheese for myself. They would be stupid enough to eat right off the top and that's a dead give-away."

Throwing the Teenie Weenies a superior glance, the mouse hurried away toward the grocery and his wealth. It wasn't long, though, until the Teenie Weenies heard from a sparrow, who had it straight from one of the respectable mice, that a depression had overtaken Ginky. The grocer had brought a cat to live in the grocery basement.
